§ 1983 suit. We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1291. and we affirm.

Because the parties are familiar with the facts of this case, we need not recount them here. We review a district court's grant of summary judgment de novo. See L.F. v. Lake Wash. Sch. Dist. #414, 947 F.3d 621 , 625 (9th Cir. 2020).

We review a decision to stay discovery proceedings for abuse of discretion. See Little v. City of Seattle, 863 F.2d 681 , 685 (9th Cir. 1988). We review a denial of leave to amend for abuse of discretion. See Garmon v. Cty. of Los Angeles, 828 F.3d 837 , 842 (9th Cir. 2016). We review a denial of a motion for appointment of counsel for abuse of discretion. See Cano v. Taylor, 739 F.3d 1214 , 1218 (9th Cir. 2014). We review a district court's denial of a motion for spoliation for abuse of discretion. See Ryan v. Editions Ltd. West, Inc., 786 F.3d 754 , 759 (9th Cir. 2015).

The district court properly granted summary judgment to Defendant Parks on the basis of qualified immunity. No case clearly establishes that the conduct at issue here constitutes retaliation under the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act. Moreover, the search of Anderson's cell and the seizure of the baby oil bottle as contraband served a valid penological purpose—namely, ensuring the security of the prison by prohibiting and removing contraband. Therefore, he cannot satisfy the elements of a retaliation claim. See Rhodes v. Robinson, 408 F.3d 559 , 568 (9th Cir. 2005).

The district court did not abuse its discretion by staying discovery with respect to the merits of Anderson's claims while it decided a dispositive motion on the basis of administrative exhaustion; the district court did not stay discovery with respect to arguments considered at summary judgment or with respect to the substantive defenses raised by Defendant Parks. See Little, 863 F.2d at 685 (holding the district court did not abuse its discretion by staying discovery pending the resolution of one issue if discovery would not affect a decision on that issue).

The district court did not abuse its discretion by denying Anderson's motion for leave to amend because he sought to add ten new defendants after briefing on the summary judgment motion had already been completed. In its screening order, the court had not allowed claims to proceed against "Doe" defendants, so it had already considered the issue. See AmerisourceBergen Corp. v. Dialysist West, Inc., 465 F.3d 946 , 951 (9th Cir. 2006).

The district court did not abuse its discretion by denying Anderson's motions for appointment of counsel because there is no right to counsel in civil rights actions and the court will grant requests for counsel only in exceptional circumstances. See Palmer v. Valdez, 560 F.3d 965 , 970 (9th Cir. 2009). No exceptional circumstances were present here because the legal issues were not particularly complex, and Anderson ably demonstrated his ability to articulate his claims.

Finally, the district court did not abuse its discretion by denying Anderson's motion for spoliation because it reasonably determined that the contents of the baby oil bottle were not relevant to Anderson's First Amendment retaliation claims. Given that the evidence was irrelevant, and therefore, not admissible per Fed. R. Evid. 402, it would make little sense to penalize the Defendants for disposing of the evidence.
